

Farm policy focus at Ukraine event

A scientific conference in the Ukraine has concluded that domestic agrarian policy should be revised and more closely connected to the development of a market economy in the country.

Organised by the Institute of Agrarian Economy (National Academy of Science) and the Institute of Agrarian Markets Development, the event was held in Kyiv in late September.

It was devoted to the presentation of agrarian pre-election programs by the most important political forces in the Ukraine.

The conference showed that all politicians in the Ukraine support Ukraine's integration into the world market community and its structures, including the WTO.
